Truck soars 60 metres!

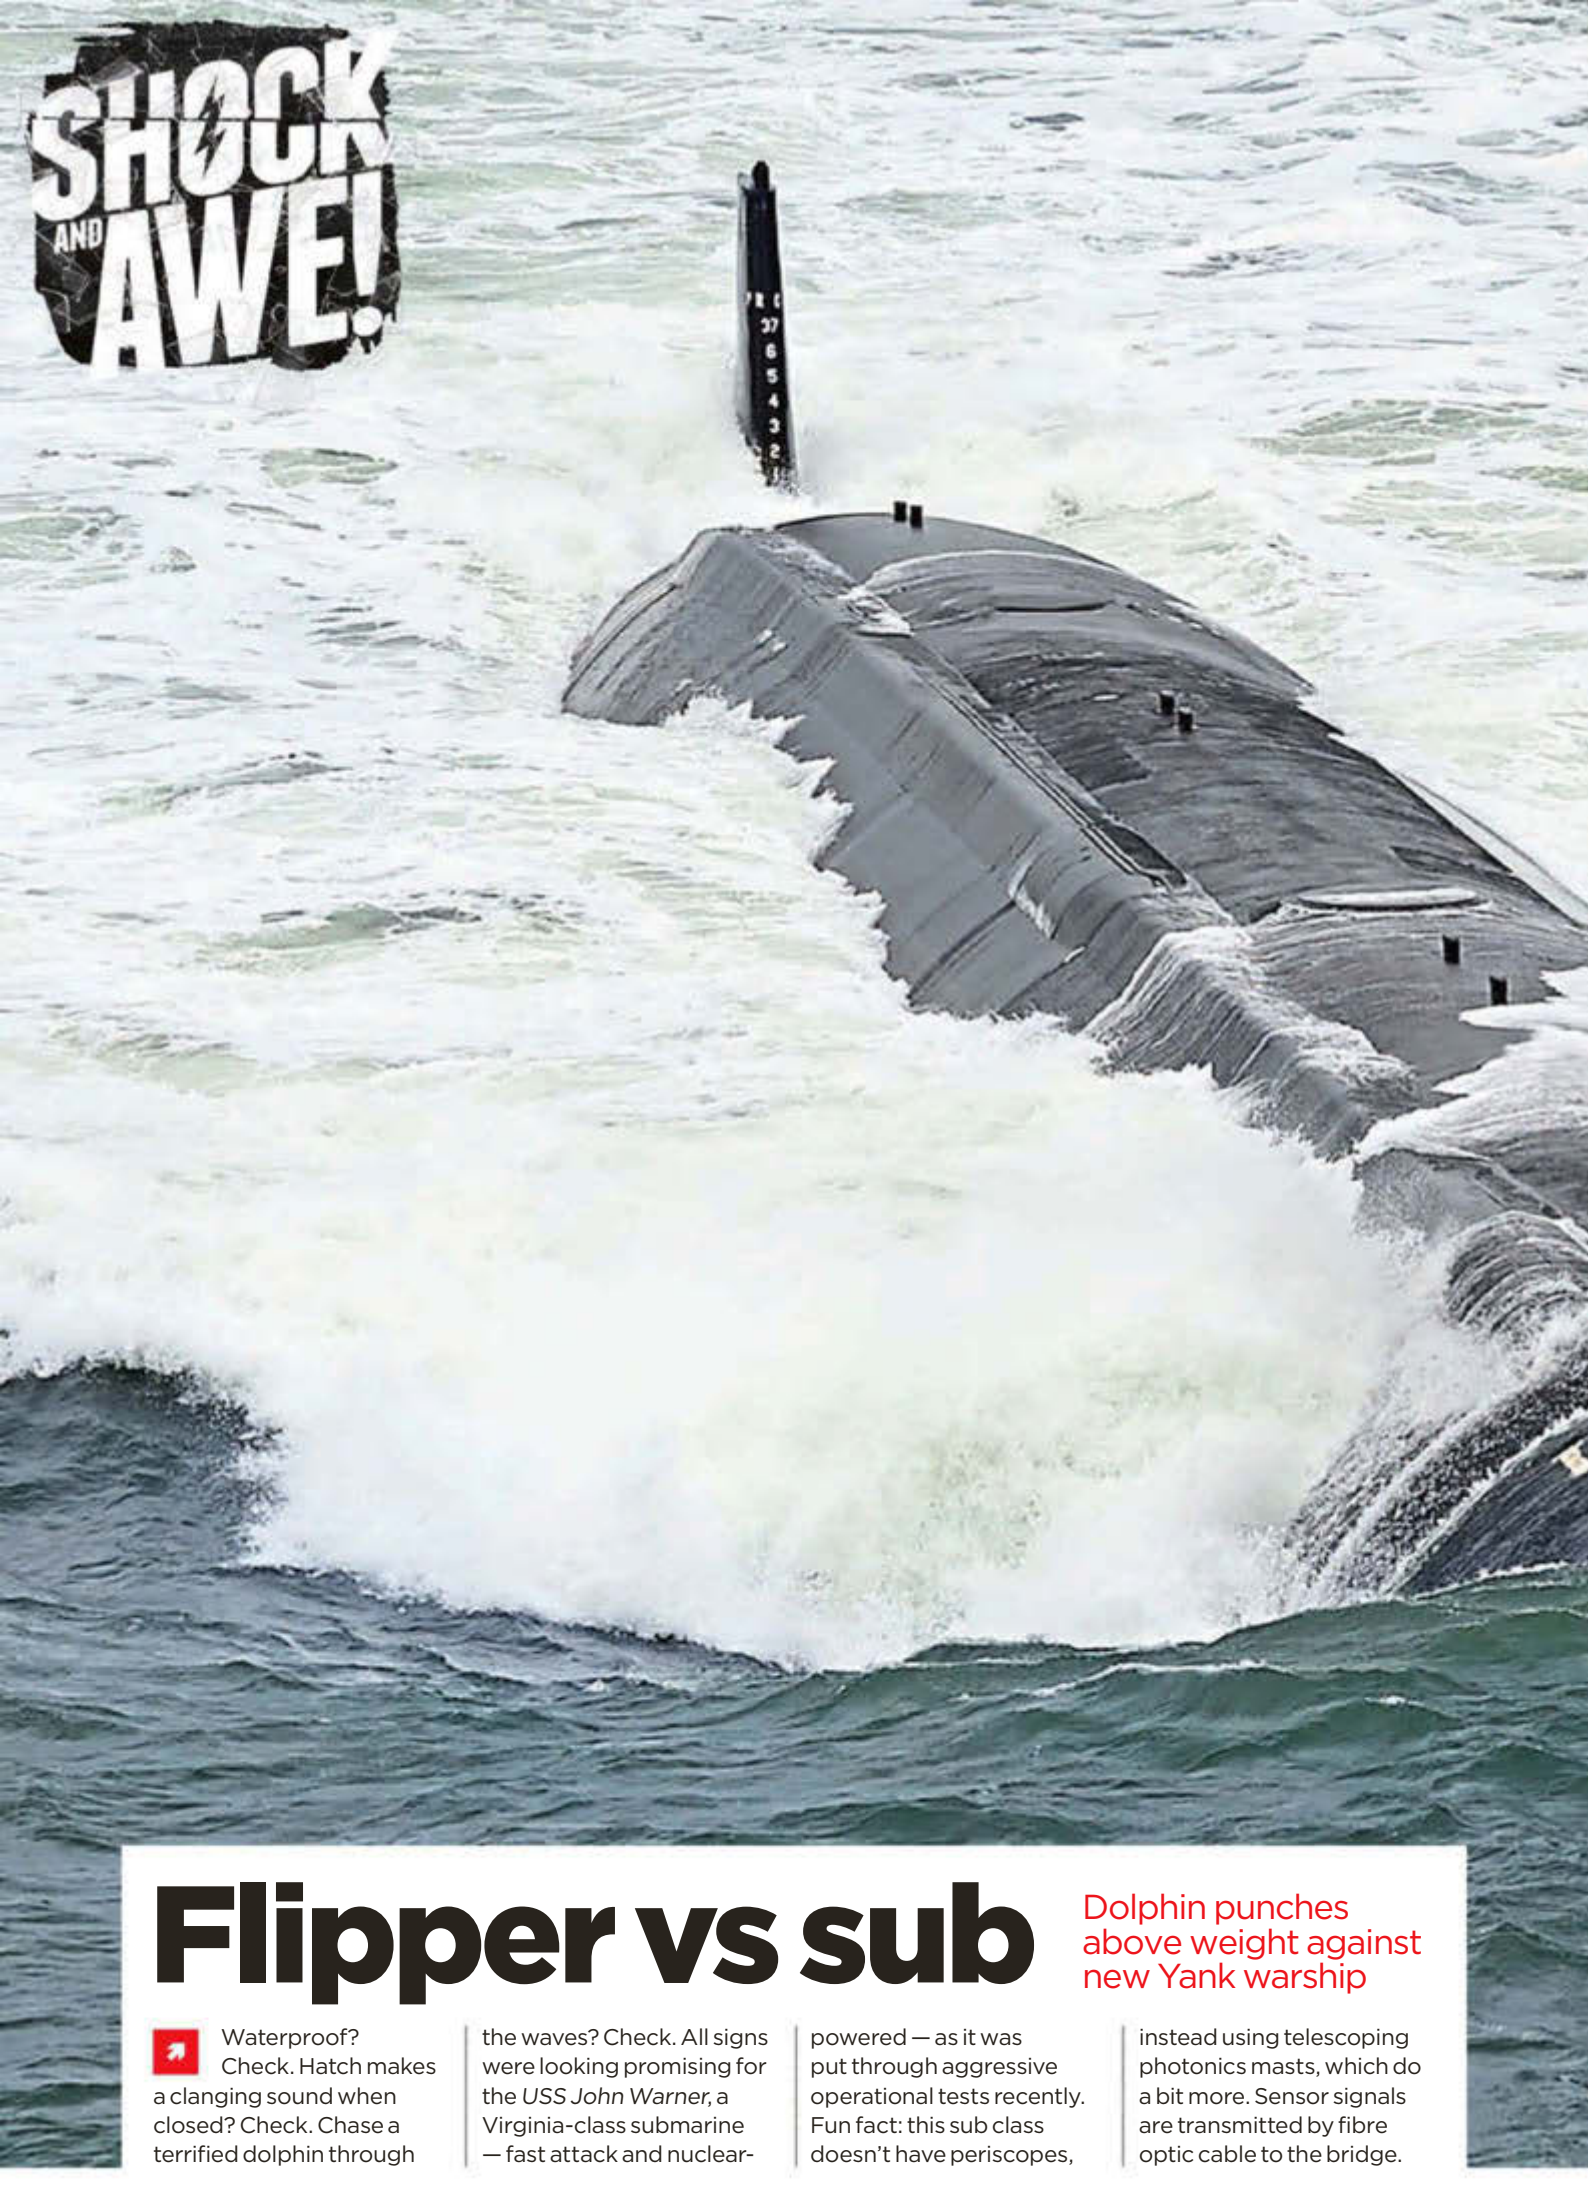

No strings, wires or Photoshopping needed, just a ramp, a 671kW off-roader and an extreme sports legend

Not satisfied with offroad racing, motocross pioneer Brian Deegan also tried his hand at flying recently. He soared 30m high while making a 60m jump across tabletop scrub in southern California in his championship-winning Pro 2 truck. While in the air, Deegan had time to alter his flight path: more throttle to raise the nose, brakes to lower it.

Dolphin punches above weight against new Yank warship

Waterproof? Check. Hatch makes a clanging sound when closed? Check. Chase a terrified dolphin through the waves? Check. All signs were looking promising for the USS John Warner, a Virginia-class submarine — fast attack and nuclear-powered — as it was put through aggressive operational tests recently. Fun fact: this sub class doesn't have periscopes, instead using telescoping photonics masts, which do a bit more. Sensor signals are transmitted by fibre optic cable to the bridge.

Rebecca Edwards' badonkadonk makes Beyonce's bum look flatter than Elijah Wood's chest

G'day, Rebecca. You're a big-time glamour model at home in the UK. So why did you come all the way Down Under?
I came here to get away from the madness back home for a short while, and I've always wanted to do it, so I thought it's now or never [laughs].
What do you think of Aussie men?
They're all really good-looking and generous, but very controlling [laughs].
We'll assume you're just talking about the guys at Customs. Have you ever had a crush on an Australian bloke?

You can't go wrong with Hugh Jackman because he is FIT! I do have my eye on an Aussie lad at the minute, actually!
Lucky bastard! What are the biggest differences between Oz and British men, apart from us being better at cricket?
British men are funnier and are more smooth about how they approach you. Australian men just don't care [laughs].
Who are the better kissers?
Sorry to say, but definitely British men.
Ouch! Which bit of your body are you famous for?
Everyone always says my bum.
And the bit of you that gets the most attention?
My bum or my eyes. I get just as many compliments on each of them from guys! That can't be bad [laughs].

Have you had any crazy nights out in Australia since you've been here?
Yes, I've had a lot! I'm known as the partier and I never go home... oops!
Who parties harder — the Aussies or Brits?
Brits, most definitely! The Aussies reckon they can but we out-party them every time! They do try, though.
Are you a fan of taking sexy selfies?
Yes, my friends are forever shaking their heads at me for how many selfies I take [laughs]. I'm like whatttt? No shame at all!
What's your favourite selfie angle?
It's all about my right side looking up into the camera! Looking seductive with a pout to match... or so I try [laughs].

Rebecca EDWARDS

Do you get a lot of guys creeping on your social media?
I do, but what can you expect when you're posting half-naked modelling photos and sexy selfies! Still, sometimes there is just no need in what some say! Ewww...
We notice you've got a tongue piercing. What are the benefits of having that?
Everyone always thinks, "Aw, you're cute," then they catch my tongue piercing and their opinion soon changes to, "Ah, you're naughty!" [laughs]. I just like it because it's kinda cheeky and sexy at the same time, and the guys love it!
Do you like guys with piercings and tatts?
Oh my god! Yes, I love a guy covered in tattoos — the more coverage, the better!

What's the main thing that makes you want to get with guy?

A bad boy who's gonna tell me what to do! I do like to do as I'm told... sometimes!

Do you have any exciting plans lined up for the rest of the year?

I'm going back to England to catch up with work and friends, then I will be having a mad summer over there — definitely Ibiza and who knows where else! I'm always jetting off somewhere for a party [laughs].

Would you ever move out and live in Austraila?

I would, yes! I love the weather and the way of living here — it's amazing! I have met some of the most amazing people.

UNBELIEV… …WO… …S BIGGEST GRAFFITI

Great jump, but Travis Pastrana still couldn't crack it for third place

Faster, higher, stronger, SICKER!

Missed the action from this year's X Games? We've got you sorted...

Aussie Vince Byron caused the upset of the 2015 Austin X Games when he brought Pommy Jamie Beswick's run of nine consecutive BMX gold medals — the longest streak in Games history — to a halt.

The 25-year-old from Brisbane performed the first 540 flair ever at X on his initial run, giving him 92 points and enough room to take his first gold medal, his sixth across Vert and Big Air.

"He's been knocking on the door for so many years and I haven't let him in," said a gracious Beswick. "This is a true champion."

More history was made by defending Big Air gold medallist Colton Satterfield, who landed a progressive double flair on the quarterpipe, the first ever.

Australia finished second overall with three golds, two silvers and a bronze — with one of the majors going to Kyle Baldock, who posted a 90 on his final BMX Dirt run and jumped from third to first.

Our final maximum was in the new Moto X Best Whip category, where Jarryd McNeil took 59 per cent of the fan vote. Those Texans sure love the Aussies!

Former F1 racer Scott Speed took his third RallyCross gold despite his vehicle losing car parts as he crossed the line.

And Thomas Pagès replicated his bike flip from Madrid's 2014 X-Fighters to take gold in the Moto X QuarterPipe, beating Aussie Josh Sheehan, who placed third. A total of 136,745 fans rocked up for the event.

World's largest ILLEGAL graffiti!

Gigantic piece is so huge it shows up on Google Earth

Six 18-hour days, about 1000 litres of paint, and a whopping $26,000: that's what a group of eight American activists had to go through to pull off a record-setting bit of graffiti that stretches for 914 metres in the Californian desert.

Reading "This land was our land", it was painted onto an abandoned military airstrip by the Indecline movement to raise awareness about land ownership and saving the environment. And yes, like The Footy Show's Darryl Brohman, it should be large enough to be visible on Google Earth.

Unlike other huge murals in places like Dubai, this one was done completely illegally, as the land is still owned by the US government. That meant the vandals had to keep themselves camouflaged while they worked, especially when military aircraft started circling overhead.

But that wasn't their only challenge. The group — who also produced the controversial Bumfights series you can find on the net — had to make a special device using a chain link fence to drag the runway clean of plants and other crap. Then they had to constantly use high-powered leaf blowers to keep the surface paintable.

"There's still a military presence out there," a group spokesman told Vice. "That was an unexpected problem, but the consensus was just to keep going." However, it's rumoured that once they were done, the US Navy went to the site and replaced the "Indecline" part of the mural with "USN". So it looks like they might need to make a repeat trip to fix that up with 200 litres of Liquid Paper.

IS THIS SILICON VALLEY?

Too bootylicious to be real?

Are Blac Chyna and Nicki Minaj at the front of the growing bum implants trend?

Cruel gossips have pointed to urban hip-hop model Blac Chyna and mega-star Nicki Minaj's hefty badonkadonks as proof of implants.

What a cheek to suggest Minaj can't turn her formerly flat tush into a butt with its own postcode by sheer determination and several million squats.

"It doesn't define me," says Minaj of her notorious derriere. Maybe not, but she's clearly a subscriber to the motto: "The bigger the cushion, the better the pushin'."

Bulletproof Hector protector!

Company boss takes a round to the cods to prove it works!

Galloping gonads! This groin protector stopped a bullet from turning the family jewels of Nutshellz CEO Jeremiah Raber to mush.

Because this is America, the man firing the gun is a pastor — who sinks to his knees after it's clear there's no damage, saying, "Oh Jesus, thank you!" The only evidence of contact is a slight ding on the front of the shell.

"I expected it to at least feel like a baseball, and really it was like a tap," Raber said. "I was good."

Despite his belief in his product, the clip features the longest warning against dickheadery seen in the history of dickheads, including the fairly unambiguous "Do not try to recreate this stunt or video. It is not safe."

But the layers of polyethylene, Kevlar and carbon fibre, bound with some heavy-duty epoxy, did their job. "No through penetration!" cried someone — a rare time that's been good news where the groin's involved.

For Christ's sake, mate — aim with both hands!

Pommy daredevil risks certain death to climb huge stadium arch

James Kingston is lucky he didn't end up becoming a large red stain when he climbed London's iconic Wembley Stadium recently. He stood 130m above the pitch after scaling the famous arch, and he didn't even put on a parachute just in case it all went to hell. However, we will go out on a limb and say he did put on adult nappies in case he wet himself.

THE HOTTEST NEW WHEELS EVERY WEEK

2590-horsepower, 650kmh road missile!

Fiat-Chrysler's Tomahawk concept is what hypercars will be like in 20 years

The car's so powerful you'd need a special suit to handle the 10g force when it fangs at full 1930kW throttle — powering down the road at 650kmh, which is so fast even a police helicopter wouldn't be able to keep up.

Shame it's another Gran Turismo 6 concept... but on the bright side, at least we can afford to drive it.

The 2035 SRT Tomahawk is slung so low not even Grant Denyer could fit under it. And it uses compressed air tanks for functions like spinning the front wheels and modifying the suspension.

● A doctor is addressing a large audience in Brisbane.

"The material we put into our stomachs is enough to have killed most of us sitting here, years ago. Red meat is awful. Soft drinks corrode your stomach lining. Chinese food is loaded with MSG. High-fat diets can be disastrous, and none of us realises the long-term harm caused by the germs in our drinking water. However, the most dangerous of all these things is something we all have eaten, or will eat. Can anyone here tell me which food causes the most grief and suffering for years after you've eaten it?"

After several seconds of quiet, a 75-year-old man in the front row raises his hand and softly says, "Wedding cake."

● A guy walks into a pet shop. The pet shop owner suggests an unusual pet: a talking millipede. "OK," thinks the man, "I'll give it a go". So he buys one and takes it home.

That night he decides to test out his new pet, so he opens the box and says, "I'm going to the pub for a drink, do you want to come too?" But there's no reply. He tries again: "Oi, millipede! Wanna come to the local with me?" Again, no response.

So the man rants and raves for a bit, but after a while decides to give it one more try before he takes the thing back to the shop. He takes the lid off the box and repeats, "I said I'm going to the pub for a drink, do you want to come?"

"I heard you the first time," snaps the millipede. "I'm just putting my shoes on!"

JACQUES the RIPPER

ZOO's stand-up comedian heckles life every week

THE GREATEST MOMENT IN CINEMA HISTORY

Went and saw Jurassic World at the opening 4pm Melbourne IMAX session — I bought tickets six weeks ago because I'm that guy. I got into the cinema at about 4.05pm, 'cos I went over-time at the candy bar buying the commemorative Jurassic World cup. I got burnt by The Dark Knight Rises cup a few years back, which was too big to fit in the cinema seat cupholder, and long story short... I crush heaps of pussy.

The assigned seats are in the centre of the whole cinema and as I walk down the aisle, stepping on toes and all-round not giving a fk, I look to the back row and see what I'd estimate to be a seven-year-old child, a three-year-old and a baby who's six months, max, sitting on its mother's lap and crankin' out some real squeally tears. I don't know why it's crying. It might have something to do with the fact that babies are born with two fears: falling and loud noises, and it's sitting at the top of the sheer cliff-face IMAX seating plan and surrounded by THE LOUDEST SPEAKER SYSTEM IN THE FREE WORLD! It's just a theory. I'm no physicist.

Everyone else around the family is obviously distraught but also paralysed with Melbourne politeness, so they're not saying shit. I go all call-a-spade-a-spade Queenslander and say, "Oh, that's fked!" Several people laugh. I went to pull out my phone to take a photo of this Swiss Family Clusterfk, but I stopped myself 'cos I didn't wanna seem like a paedophile. Then I sat down and thought, no-one would have cared if I was a creepy paedophile taking photos. I could have been Rolf Harris dressed in a priest outfit and the whole cinema would have been all "Fk yeah, the cavalry has arrived!" Anything that might have put some sense into that idiot mother.

Twenty minutes into the movie there's a scene where the big scary dinosaur does something real loud and dinosaury and all three kids start bawling. Then Mother of the Year shuffles all three of them out of the cinema and into some therapy. We all cheer. I came a little bit.

People often ask me what the greatest moment in cinema history is and I will tell them: the Jurassic World scene where the three kids tried to fk 400 adults against their will and the Indominus Rex scared them off before they could finger all our childhoods.

JACQUES' COCK IS ON tinder

ME: Yeah, totally. I'm looking for a guy who can give me a little touch-up whenever he realises I've got more talent than he does.
UNSUSPECTING DUDE: I don't have more talent than you.
ME: Thanks for spelling that one out, Ike.
UNSUSPECTING DUDE: Ike?
ME: Ike Turner... give yourself an uppercut.

THE HOTTEST NEW LOOKS OF 2015

Get some fashion tips from punters who'll be unemployed for the rest of their lives

4500 PIERCINGS IN ONE SITTING!

There are more holes in Matthew Menczyk's body than there are in the plot of a Michael Bay movie. The Canadian had over 4500 surgical needles inserted in an awful eight-hour session, smashing the previous world record by 650. And apparently the worst pain came when they pulled them out of the bloke now known as the "human sieve".

ARE THEY BOXERS OR JUST ANOTHER TATT?

The honest answer is we've got no bloody idea. Old mate here is such a riot of colour that those undies — if, indeed, he's wearing any — simply blend right in. About the only big bit of skin he hasn't had inked is his face, which is cool because it makes that awesome handlebar moustache stand out just that little bit more. And just to stay on trend, he's accessorised his look with a huge string of anal beads.

THE NEW HOST OF PLAYSCHOOL!

Just kidding. But we do reckon old mate here has a bright future in the childcare sector, modelling high fashion for men's labels like Ralph Lauren, or in children's entertainment. He'd be a shoo-in if they ever need to replace the red Wiggle. Not only could he wake up Geoff, he'd give the poor bloke a fking heart attack into the bargain.

THAT'S NOT GOING TO WASH OFF

Anyone who's had a flu jab at the doctor's knows how much needles hurt. So you have to pay respect to this woman, who had a very sharp bit of metal jabbed into her head approximately 8000 times a minute at a recent tattoo event in Sydney. So if you're thinking of emulating the punters on these pages and getting your face or head inked, get ready to feel something that'll give you more pain than 20,000 hangovers.

LOOK! UP IN THE SKY! IT'S A BIRD!

If you thought driving through herds of retards in peak-hour traffic was the worst mode of transport on Earth, you're wrong — and this photo proves it. Miss Crash is a performance artist who moves across the stage thanks to a couple of ropes tied to two huge meathooks that've been plunged into her back. As you can see, this makes wearing a bra impossible because the bloody straps would get in the way.

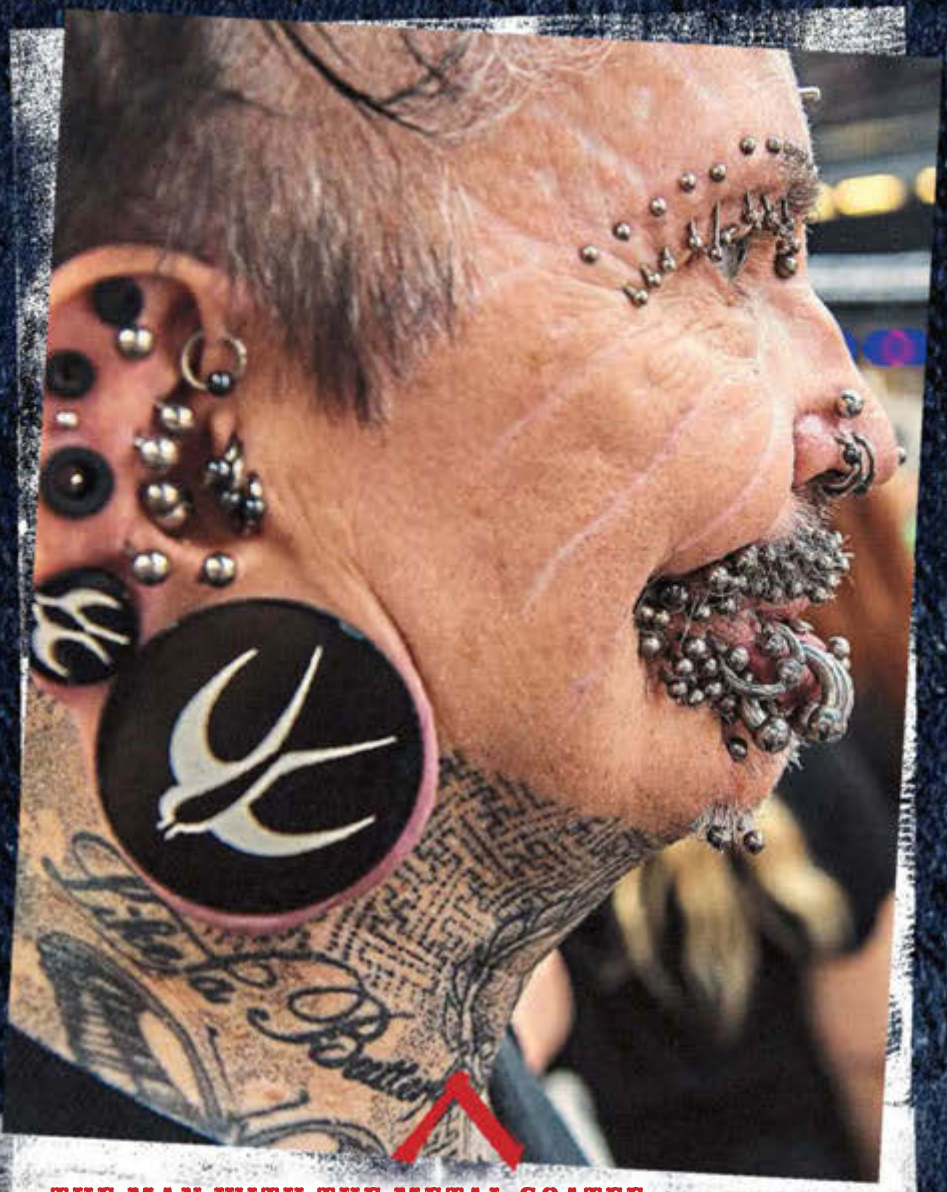

COMING SOON TO SPORTSGIRL!

Our charming friend here is sporting enough needles to keep a Kings Cross shooting gallery fully stocked for six months. Even better, she's attached feathers to some of her piercings to make a bold fashion statement. And that statement is: "I'm going to keep getting these feathers poked into my back until everyone mistakes me for a peacock."

HOW DOES HE SMELL? GOD ONLY NOSE

Venezuelan bloke Henry Damon has had his nose cut off and face tattooed red so he looks like Red Skull, the villain from the first Captain America movie. He's also had subdermal implants whacked into his forehead to complete the effect. Hopefully he can pay for all of this by selling his nose to Charlie Sheen when the Two and a Half Men star's shnozz falls off due to all that cocaine abuse.

THE MAN WITH THE METAL GOATEE

German dude Rolf Buchholz was so tired of going to the pub and being caught without a coaster for his beer that he decided to have a pair embedded in his earlobes. He has a total of 453 piercings at last count, which has been a world record since 2010 — no challengers? — and says officials refused him entry to Dubai because they reckoned he was into black magic. We reckon it's because he overloaded their metal detector.

WHAT'S SO BLOODY FUNNY, MATE?

Getting ready to be suspended via hooks dug through your forearms and thighs is a very serious procedure. So thank God that guy in the surgical mask cracked old mate here up with a diamond of a joke at this year's Israel Tattoo Convention in Tel Aviv. Just look at his face — he's laughing so hard he might bust a gut!

PICTURES: ALAMY, PICTURE MEDIA, AUSTRALSCOPE, GETTY IMAGES

I SPY WITH MY TATTOOED EYES...

Getting every square inch of his face covered in ink wasn't enough for the German tattoo model who calls himself "Magneto" — he also had his eyeballs done! Presumably not at Specsavers, though. We've got no idea how you get away with that without going completely blind, but it seems to be working for him. A bloke this fearless has probably had his penis tattooed so that it looks exactly like Angry Anderson.

HARDCORE RICHMOND TIGERS FAN!

There are realistic back jobs, and then there's this effort, which is so spot-on that we keep waiting for that tiger to liberate itself from this fella and go chase down a gazelle for dinner. This guy could never go to the beach in China because there's a very good chance someone will shoot him in the back and try to make some traditional medicine out of his skin.

NICE PASSPORT PHOTO, BUDDY

He's an American performance artist called The Enigma, and yes, he's running a set of tubes up his nose and back out of his mouth. Which is actually the most normal thing about him, believe it or not. The Californian sports a full-body jigsaw puzzle tatt, but if you look closely at his ears you'll see that a few pieces are missing. He was also the first person in the world to get a set of horns implanted. Bravo!

I NOW PRONOUNCE YOU THING AND WIFE

Uruguayan tatt artist Victor Peralta and his darling wife Gabriela (we have no idea which one's which) are in the Guinness Book as the married couple with the most body modifications. They have 77 mods between them, and bulk ink; Vic's covered 90 per cent of his skin, and Gabby's up to 65 per cent. Rumour has it their piercings stayed locked up for four hours when he kissed the bride at their wedding.

IN THE ZOO WITH

ted

The bong-smoking bear chats to ZOO about ladyboys, threesomes and Ted 2

G'day, Ted. How have you changed since the worldwide success of the first Ted film?
I don't think fame has changed me at all. I still drink Bud Light now it is served in a golden chalice by Phun-Li, my own personal Thai ladyboy. But basically I still put my pants on one leg at a time like everyone else... I mean, if I wore pants that last thing would be true. It's always been my mantra that it's important to stay humble. "Do you have any weed?" is another one of my famous mantras.

What did it take to get you to come back for the sequel, Ted 2?
Are you calling me Ted 2? Oh, no, you're referring to the film of the same name. Got it. Kinda confusing. Well, it took a great deal of money for me to come back. Not because I want the money, heavens no. I just wanted to feel the commitment to the project on the fiduciary side of things, if that makes sense. It doesn't? Damn.

What was it like teaming up again with Mark Wahlberg and Jessica Barth?
Being that they are the only actors I've ever worked with professionally — I don't count Jean-Claude Van Damme — it was a welcome reunion. I've kind of taken Mark under my wing, poor kid. He needed the direction because his career has been a little "meh" lately.

I told him the first thing he should do is a Marky Mark and the Funky Bunch reunion tour. At this point in his career, he really needs to remind people where he came from and give the people those "good vibrations" they've been dying for.

Having now been married in a movie, what are your thoughts on marriage in general?

I'm all for it. Sure, some people call it "an institution", in that it feels like a prison from which there's no escape. But I like the idea of monogamy. I look forward to spending the rest of my life making sweet love with the same person every night. Then soon after that, every week, and then before you know it you'll be lucky if you're getting it once a year for your birthday. But it's romantic, right? First I just need to find the perfect Mrs Ted... in about 20 years or so.

The rule of a successful sequel is that bigger is better. Do you believe in that?

I think that rule applies to more than just sequels, ya know. But yeah, absolutely. And it's definitely true of Ted 2. I'm obviously a big fan of my first movie, but we've really pushed the boat out with this one. This is our Empire Strikes Back, our Temple of Doom, our Aliens. We've got more laughs, more cursing, more action, more vulgarity... To put it in perspective, Wahlberg gets covered in semen and we jerk off Tom Brady. I'll be seriously pissed if we don't get an Oscar nomination.

One of the biggest surprises of the first Ted was making Norah Jones and Flash Gordon integral to the film. What can you say about the cameos you have in store for us this time?

Well, like you said before, "bigger is better". That's why we got the giant wildling from Game of Thrones. He plays my high school buddy, Crusher. He was fun on set, but he kept destroying his trailer every day simply by getting in it. We have wrongly accused football legend Tom Brady in there. He was so good-looking that a lot of people on set, male and female, were just passing out at the very sight of him. There are loads more, but you'll just have to pay your five bucks and see. Oh, it's 15 bucks now? Forget it! Wait for Netflix.

Were there scenes that you wanted to be included in this film that were cut in the end?

Yeah, my threeway with Susan Sarandon and Julianne Moore. We just didn't have time for it in the movie, but I've uploaded it to one of my favourite websites instead. Just go to runofthemilf.com.

We've heard, like your character, that you're a big fan of karaoke. What's your gold standard and what's your Top 40 crowd-pleaser?

Oh boy, where to begin? Well, my Top 40 crowd-pleaser would either be Call Me Maybe by Carly Rae Jepsen or Let It Go from Frozen — I have a thing for cartoon babes. As for my gold standard, I guess that would be Meatloaf's I Would Do Anything For Love. I just love shouting "sex and drugs and rock and roll" as I power slide across the floor. And Wahlberg does a very respectable job with the girl's part.

You visit New York in the new film. How did you like it?

Well, besides the fact that I'm a Red Sox fan and the place is filled with freakin' Yankees fans, I actually really like New York. It's a town where being crude and obnoxious is pretty much the norm, so I fit in really well.

Had you ever thought about civil rights before you got entangled in your own case?

Of course, man! I'm an American — we learn about our racist past before we're old enough to even say the N-bomb. Which, incidentally, I only ever do in an ironic sense or when singing along to hip-hop. So yeah, I know about civil rights. I voted for Barack Obama. I saw 12 Years A Slave. I listen to Public Enemy. I have my share of white guilt, okay?

Did you do a lot of research to prepare for the court scenes?

You bet. However, I'm of the opinion there's nothing in the American justice system that can't be learned from watching Law & Order. I don't know why students bother with law school when you can get it all covered in 60 minutes of TV and still have time for a bong and a beer. Well, that show and Judge Judy.

In the new film, you visit Comic-Con. How did you find it? Do you have any secret, nerdy pleasures?

That entire conference hall is one big nerdy pleasure. Though some of the Dungeons & Dragons dudes get a little intense for me. Guys, you know, a little fresh air once in a while wouldn't hurt! You might even meet a real human lady when you're there — you know, a chick whose name isn't Princess She-Ra of Elonin. But the cosplay girls, they are my favourite; particularly anyone who dresses as an Ewok — especially Latara, the cute lady one. The thought of her got me through many lonely nights as a teenage cub.

AUSTRALIA'S MOST EVIL

Find out why these sick crims should stay in jail until they die...

THE LONELY HEARTS KILLER

One of the biggest mistakes the Australian criminal justice system ever made was releasing Rodney Cameron from jail in 1990. He was inside for the 1974 murders of Florence Jackson, whom he raped and strangled, and Francesco Ciliberto, who picked Cameron up when he was on the run and got bashed, strangled and thrown to his death as a result. Despite being called a "psychopath not fit to be in society" by court-appointed shrinks and sentenced to jail for the term of his natural life, Cameron was freed, and within three months he'd killed again. Maria Goellner met him through a radio matchmaking program he'd advertised on. She was bashed with a blunt object and found dead in a pool of her own blood with a bunch of carnations on her chest, and Cameron became known as the "Lonely Hearts Killer" after his arrest and imprisonment for that crime. Sadly, it doesn't end there. While inside he confessed to five more murders, making him one of Australia's worst serial killers. One of those was the 1974 slaying of Sarah McKenzie, 79, in Sydney. She was found with 30 knife wounds to her chest. Cameron is back inside and this time he won't get out.

THE BIKIE WHO SHOT UP MELBOURNE

At about 8.20am on June 18, 2007, two bystanders in the Melbourne CBD tried to help a young woman who was being attacked by a burly blond man. Solicitor Brendan Keilar and Dutch backpacker Paul de Waard had bravely stood up to Hells Angel bikie Christopher Wayne Hudson, who was high from a night of alcohol, ice and steroids. He had attacked stripper Autumn Daly-Holt and was turning his attention to former girlfriend Keara Douglas. Hudson pulled out a gun and shot Douglas, Keilar and de Waard. Keilar died in the street from a head wound. De Waard and Douglas were both shot in the stomach. Hudson did a runner, dumping his weapon and jacket on a nearby construction site, before surrendering to police two days later. He'd clearly been on the brink for some time — six days prior to the murders Hudson had given Pies star Alan Didak a lift after they'd got chatting while drinking, which ended with Hudson going on a shooting rampage. And in 2006, after defecting from The Finks bikie gang to the Hells Angels, he'd been in a fight at a kickboxing match and was shot in the chin. Hudson was jailed for life, with a minimum non-parole period of 35 years.

Gosling Park, where Bilal Skaf committed one of many rapes

SYDNEY'S PACK-RAPE MONSTER

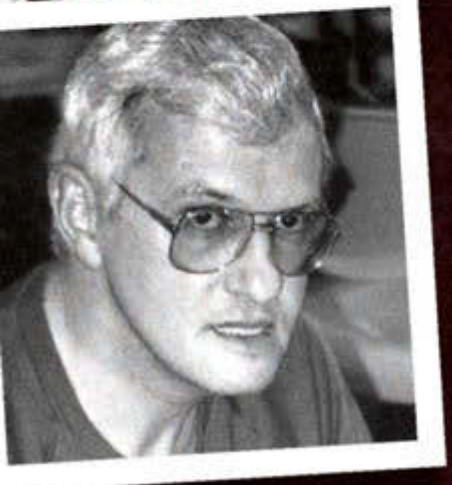

Feral scumbag Bilal Skaf was sentenced to 55 years in prison — reduced to 32 in 2006 — for leading pack rape attacks with up to 14 Lebanese-Australian youths against women just before the Sydney Olympics. Sentencing judge Justice Michael Finnane called Skaf "a liar, a bully, a coward, callous and mean. He is, in truth, a menace to any civilised society." He said the attacks were like "you hear about or read about only in the context of wartime atrocities". Just 19 when convicted, Skaf quit school at 14 and drifted into a life of petty crime, before a switch flipped in his evil head. The revolting rapes he organised were against Anglo women and teenage girls, some as young as 14. One woman was raped 25 times over six hours in three separate locations, during which time she was called an "Aussie pig" and asked if "Leb cock tasted better than Aussie cock". When Skaf's fiancée ended their relationship shortly after he was sentenced, he sketched pictures of her being raped and murdered. He's never apologised for his crimes, and laughed and joked at his trial. He was bashed by three men in April, leaving him with minor head injuries, and will be eligible for parole in 18 years.

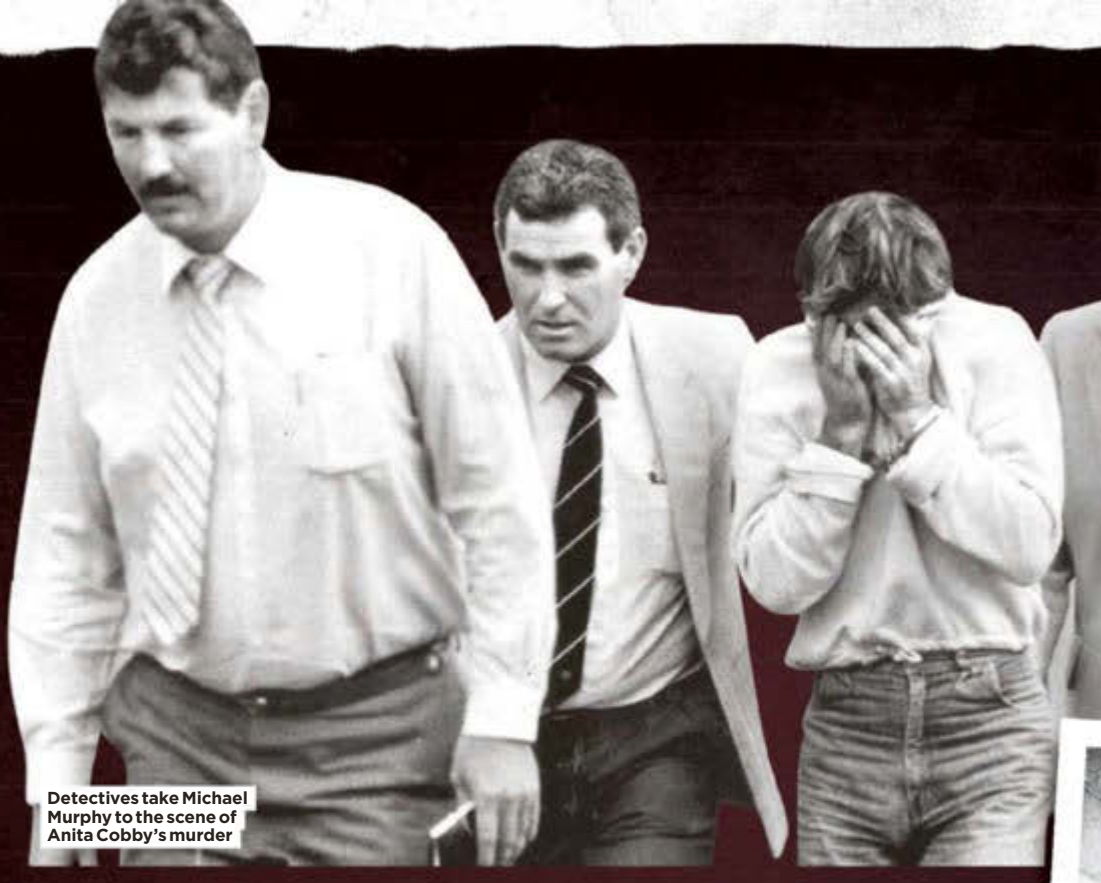

UNSPEAKABLE CRIMES OF PETER DUPAS

Before you read on, be comforted to know that Dupas is serving three life sentences for murder. He's also a suspect in three more killings in the Melbourne area in the '80s and '90s. This monster was a convicted multiple rapist when he committed his first murder in 1997, taking the life of Margaret Maher, who'd been stabbed and hit with a cinder block. A short while later Dupas killed Mersina Halvagis while she visited her grandma's grave in Melbourne. She received a staggering 87 stab wounds. Two years later he stabbed and raped Nicole Patterson. As horrific as all this is, what became known as Dupas's trademark adds an extra facet of terror to his crimes: he cut off one or both of his first two victims' breasts. Described as a "frightened boy" in a man's body while in jail, he has tried to commit suicide several times on the inside.

Detectives take Michael Murphy to the scene of Anita Cobby's murder

THE MURDERER THAT TERRIFIED A NATION

On February 2, 1986, five men from west Sydney committed a crime that still fills people with rage today. Michael, Gary and Les Murphy, together with John Travers and Michael Murdoch, raped and murdered beauty queen and nurse Anita Cobby in circumstances so monstrous that the hardened police who worked her case were left gutted by what she went through. The 26-year-old was savagely beaten and left with multiple broken bones and dislocations before her throat was slit. "What she went through... no-one deserved to die like this," said retired chief inspector Gary Raymond, who investigated her death. "Those men had no excuse for the brutal way they treated her. They showed her no mercy." When the killers were arrested there was an explosion of anger from the western Sydney community, which was badly shaken by the crime. All five were sentenced to life in prison with no chance of ever being released. Many believed they deserved far, far worse.

HORROR IN THE CITY OF CHURCHES

Twisted bastard Bevan Spencer von Einem — and accomplices unknown — snatched Richard Kelvin, 15, off an Adelaide street 60m from his home in 1983. Kelvin wouldn't be seen alive again; von Einem kept him locked up for five weeks during which time he was repeatedly drugged, tortured and raped before being killed and his body dumped. The autopsy revealed the boy had likely died from massive internal injuries caused by a blunt object, such as a beer bottle, being forced into his rectum. There was also massive bruising on his head and back. Von Einem was sentenced to life for Kelvin's murder, with an eventual non-parole of 36 years, a then South Australian record. He was also a suspect in the murders of four other young men from 1979-'82, and was re-arrested for two of them. The charges were dropped after legal wrangling.

AUSTRALIA'S OWN HANNIBAL "THE CANNIBAL" LECTER

In 2006 convicted killer Katherine Knight appealed the length of her sentence, arguing that she hadn't committed the worst category of murder and didn't deserve to be jailed for life. She lost, which isn't surprising considering she stabbed her partner 37 times, skinned him, beheaded him and cooked parts of his body. The former abattoir worker from the Hunter Valley in NSW hung John Price's skin from a hook in their lounge room after slaying him, boiled his head in a pot and baked pieces of his buttocks with the aim of serving them to Price's adult children with vegetables and gravy. She even set the table and left shocking handwritten notes for them beside their placemats. Obsessed with knives — with which she was very skilled — Knight had a long history of violent behaviour, including holding a family hostage at knifepoint in a servo and slitting the throat of a lover's puppy. Her killing of Price was so grotesque that the details were withheld by many media outlets at the time, and she became the first Aussie woman to be given life without parole.

THE GREENOUGH FAMILY MASSACRE

In a town 400km north of Perth one February day in 1993, farm hand William Patrick Mitchell, 24, spent his time getting high on weed, grog and goey. He then tooled up with an axe and headed to the house of a woman, Karen MacKenzie, 31, who'd recently rejected him. Her 16-year-old son Daniel was hacked down first when Mitchell arrived there. Next was Karen, asleep in the lounge room. He killed her with an axe, then raped her dead body. Somehow Karen's daughters, Amara, seven, and Katrina, five, slept through the slaughter in different bedrooms. Mitchell then murdered them in circumstances so horrific the judge ruled they should never be made public. All that's known is Mitchell pleaded guilty to one charge of sexually assaulting Amara. Mitchell was arrested five weeks after the shocking murders, and sentenced to four consecutive life sentences, with a 20-year non-parole period. In 2013, he was refused parole. His case will be reviewed in 2016.

HE KILLED HIS OWN FAMILY

Serial fantasist Sef Gonzales phoned the police just before midnight from his family home in North Ryde, Sydney, in 2001. "Somebody shot my parents, I think," he said. "They're bleeding, they're on the floor." His parents Mary and Teddy and sister Clodine had been bashed and savagely stabbed in an attack a crown prosecutor called "a slaughter by an angry amateur who wanted to make absolutely sure they were dead". The 20-year-old student had methodically wiped out his family, starting with his sister in the late afternoon. When his mum arrived home, he slashed her throat. His dad was the last to arrive — Gonzales stabbed him in the back, severing his spinal cord, then finished him off. After spraying "FK OFF ASIANS KKK" on the wall, he spent the evening with a mate. Investigators were struck by his lack of emotion, and soon found his alibi had more holes than a pair of old socks. He put a deposit on a Lexus and bought 15 bottles of aftershave. At his trial, it was revealed he was failing his university degree, and his parents were threatening to cut his inheritance off. With his family gone, he'd get everything. He was given three life sentences with no possibility of parole.

HITMAN'S DOUBLE VALENTINE'S MURDER

While contract killer Lindsay Robert Rose's killing spree dated back to 1984, the double murder on Valentine's Day 1994 — his last — was the most notorious. Rose had been hired by Mark Lewis to kill his de facto partner Kerrie Pang, the owner of Kerrie's Oasis, a Sydney massage parlour. Two bodies were found in the burning wreckage of the business: Pang, an ex-girlfriend of Rose, who had been shot and stabbed, and her employee Fatma Ozanal, who'd been shot three times. The second woman had just been in the wrongest of places at the wrong time. Pang was the target of the hit due to difficulties between her and Lewis, who didn't like her line of work, and Rose's reported hatred of her. The fire left tell-tale evidence which led police to arrest Lewis and Rose, uncovering three other murders he was responsible for. He has five consecutive life sentences.

THE POISONING AUNTIE

Mass poisoner Caroline Grills, known as Aunt Thally, liked giving tea and cakes to her relatives, with a side order of poison. She was only rumbled when the son-in-law of one victim watched Grills tip something into his cup. He switched it, and police confirmed it was deadly. Symptoms of thallium poisoning include loss of hair, nervous disorders, blindness and eventual death. Grills was arrested in 1953 while a bizarre wave of thallium poisoning swept Sydney — 46 cases with 10 deaths — and was charged with four murders and one attempted murder, all but one her in-laws. She was sentenced to death after a prosecutor called her "a killer who poisoned for sport". Her sentence was commuted, but she died in prison in 1960.

THE MUTILATOR

Just last month the man widely regarded as one of Australia's first serial killers died without ever being released from jail. William "The Mutilator" MacDonald was the oldest and longest-serving prisoner in NSW when he passed away, serving 52 years for the murders of four men in Sydney back in 1961 and 1962. All of them were homeless, and MacDonald earned his grotesque nickname by cutting off their wedding tackle with a hunting knife. His killing spree threw the vagrants of Sydney into a panic, and he kept the parts of one of his victims in a bag that he later threw off the Harbour Bridge. When the details of his rampage were read out in court, some jury members reportedly fainted. When he was caught by police he also confessed to strangling another man in Brisbane, and said voices in his head told him his victims were a British man who'd raped him as a teen. When he was found sane enough to be released, he reportedly chose to remain in jail because he knew he wouldn't be able to handle life on the outside and would begin to kill people once again.

PSYCHO KILLER COUPLE

Australia's answer to UK husband and wife serial killer team Fred and Rose West were David and Catherine Birnie, who went on a murder spree in Perth in 1986. Four women aged 15 to 31 went missing in 27 days. The couple were only stopped when four days later their intended fifth victim, a 16-year-old girl, escaped from their Willagee bungalow after being kidnapped at knifepoint the day before. She'd been tied to a bed and repeatedly raped by David as Katherine watched, and only escaped after Katherine forgot to secure her to the bed. The teenager had been forced to call her parents, and had noted the number on the Birnies' phone, which she gave police. This tipped off the cops about two of the other missing young women who'd contacted relatives in similar circumstances. During interrogation, David Birnie was told, "It's getting dark. Best we get a shovel and dig them up." He replied, "OK. There are four of them." Denise Brown was one of the corpses; after taking a lift, she'd been raped, stabbed in the neck while being raped again and buried in a shallow grave. When she sat up, David Birnie struck her twice in the head with an axe, finally ending her life.

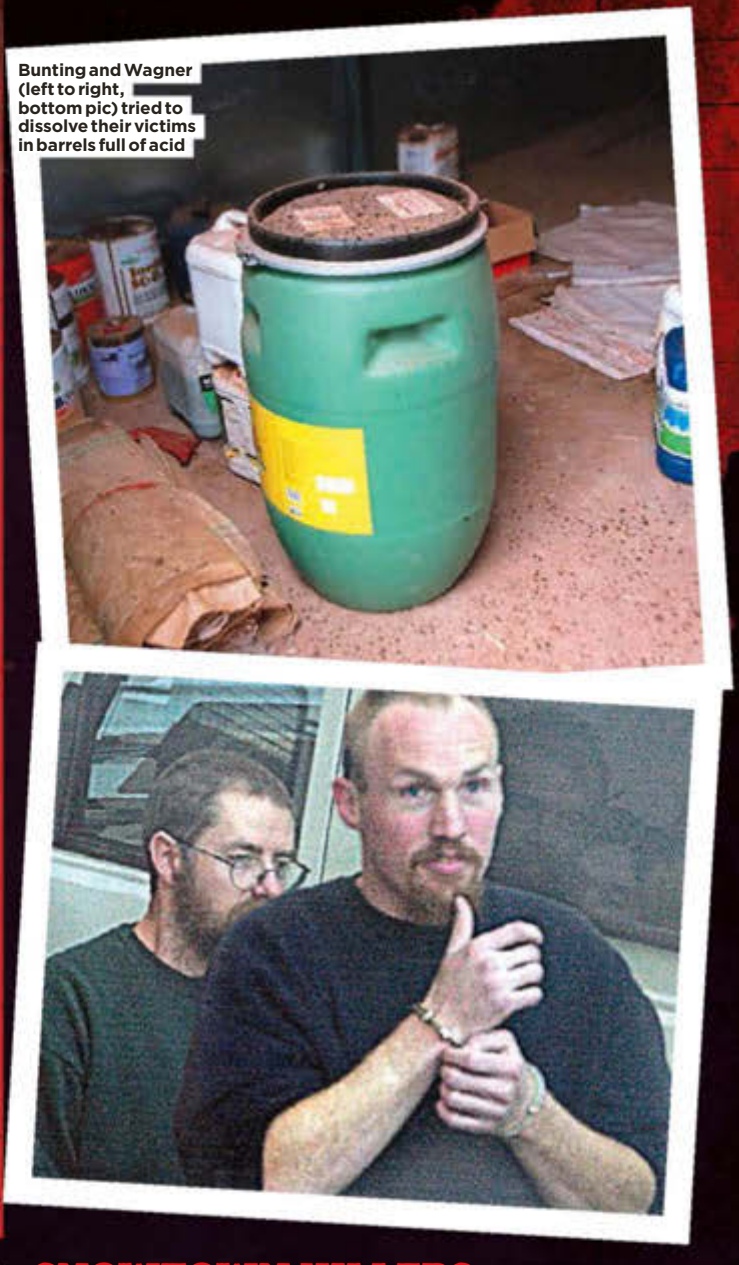

KATHLEEN FOLBIGG, SERIAL CHILD KILLER

A mother who intentionally kills one of her children is rightly thought of as an absolute monster. So what should we call Folbigg, who in 2003 was found guilty of murdering three of her kids, and of the manslaughter of a fourth child of hers? The infants were aged eight, 10 and 19 months, with the youngest, manslaughter victim Caleb, just 19 days old when he lost his life. Her crimes only came into the grim light of day when her husband Craig found her diary detailing her feelings about the ghastly deaths — though there was no direct admission of her role. The prosecution alleged the mother had smothered all her children while frustrated. Diary entries such as she was "the worst mother in the world" and "stress made [her] do terrible things" didn't help her case. Each time she woke Craig up with her screams, having discovered their children weren't breathing. But authorities successfully convinced a jury that foul play must have been involved for all four babies to die. After an appeal she was sentenced to 30 years in prison, 25 years non-parole. But she has high-profile supporters who think she's innocent.

Bunting and Wagner (left to right, bottom pic) tried to dissolve their victims in barrels full of acid

MORNINGTON SPEARGUN MURDERS

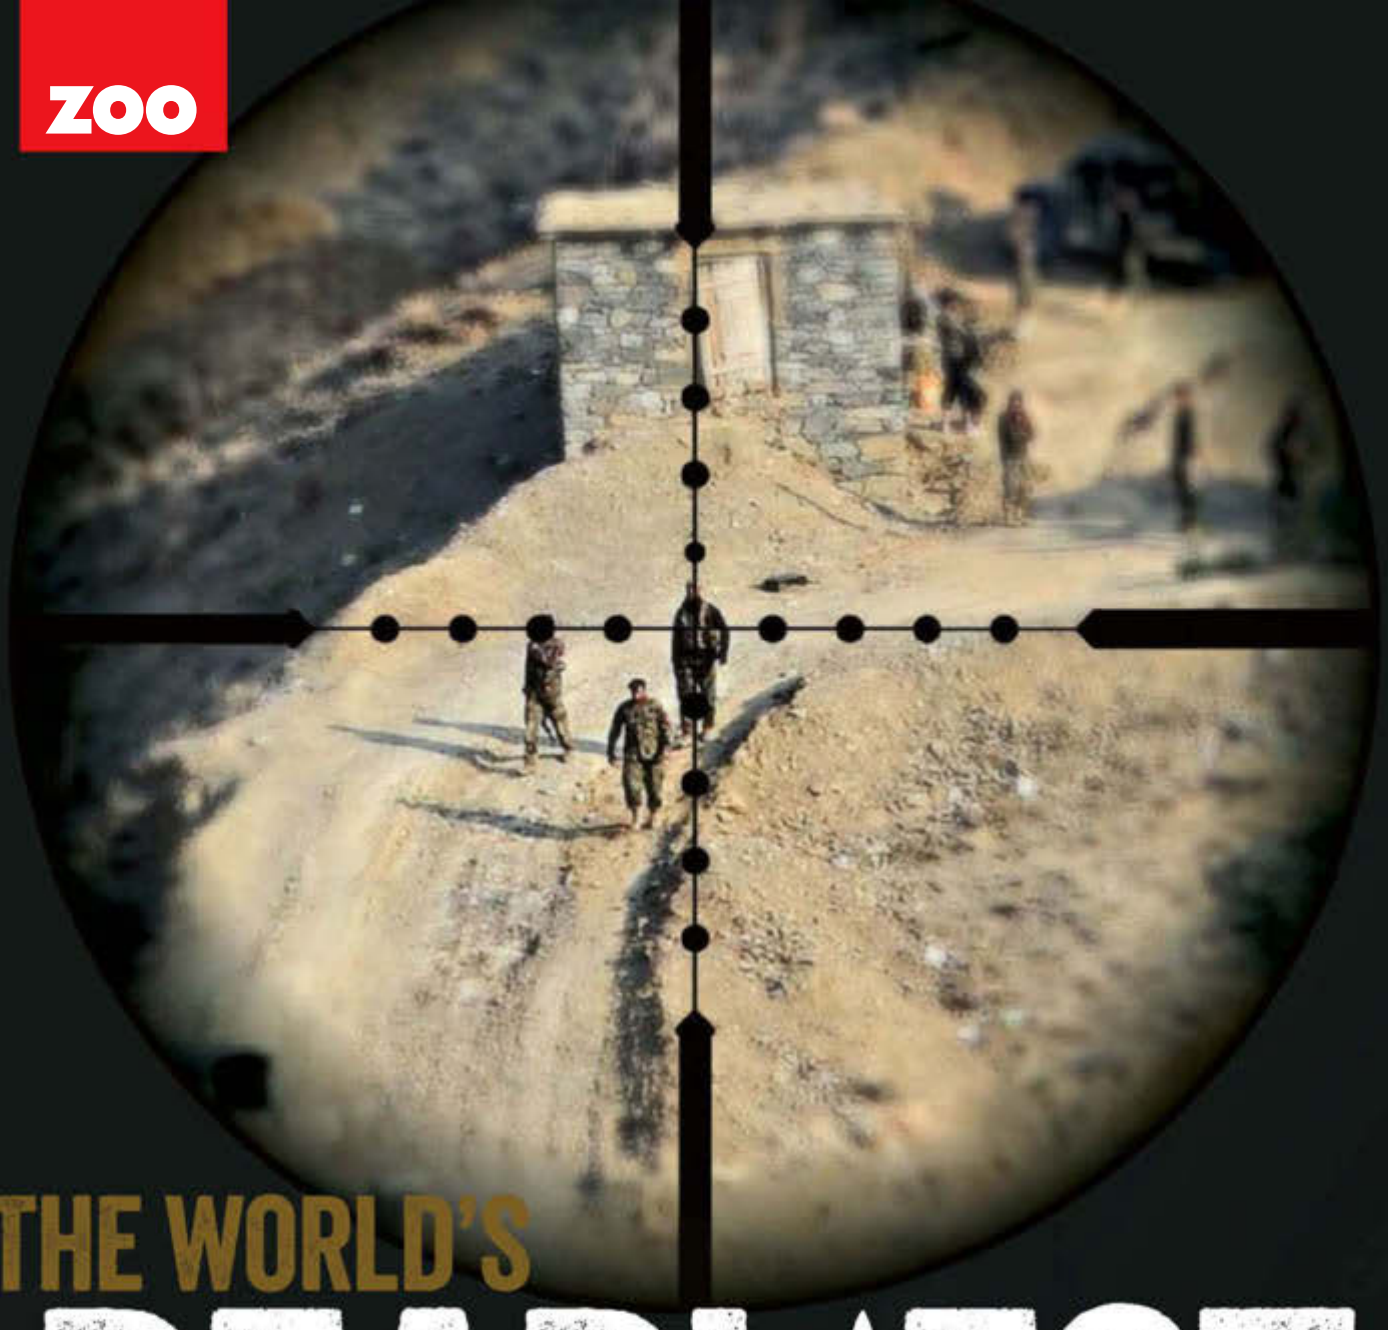

When John Sharpe's pregnant wife Anna and daughter Gracie went missing in March 2004, he fronted the media and got emotional as he claimed she'd left him for another man and taken his girl away. In truth, Sharpe had repeatedly fired a speargun into his wife's head, then done the same to his 19-month-old daughter four days later. After burying Anna he even dug her up and dismembered her before disposing of her remains, as well as forging emails to make her family think she was OK. Sharpe got two life sentences with a non-parole period of 33 years for his unimaginably awful crimes.

SNOWTOWN KILLERS SHOCKED THE WORLD

Three men were behind the infamous killings of 12 people in the 1990s, with remains of eight partially dissolved in acid in barrels in a disused bank vault in Snowtown, SA. The ringleader was John Bunting, who had a psychopathic hatred of gay men and paedophiles. As a kid, he enjoyed burning insects in acid. He exercised a mesmeric power over Robert Wagner and James Vlassakis, who helped Bunting with the torture — items like pincers, pliers and clamps were used during lengthy sessions — and murder of his victims. The group often targeted people who couldn't fight back, and stole their social security benefits. They murdered people who'd helped them kill, who'd molested them, who'd pissed them off, cutting off body parts so the corpses would fit in the barrels. Frederick Brooks had a burning sparkler jammed down his dick-eye and his nose and ears burnt with cigarettes. They dismembered, cooked and ate their last victim, David Johnson. Bunting and Wagner were convicted of 11 and 10 murders respectively and sentenced to cumulative life sentences for each charge. Bunting's considered incapable of rehabilitation and will die behind bars.

THE WORLD'S DEADLIEST SNIPER

Z MEETS SERGEANT CRAIG HARRISON, T E MAN W PULLED THE LONGEST-EVER SNIPER KILL

After spending almost his entire working life serving in Bosnia, Kosovo, Iraq and Afghanistan, sergeant Craig Harrison of Her Majesty's Household Cavalry saw his world flipped upside down when he claimed the longest-ever sniper kill. This is his story...

"I KILLED A TALIBAN LEADER FROM 2500 METRES"

Hello, Craig. Is being a sniper the toughest role in the military?
I wouldn't say that, but it is one of the most vital positions. If you have a sniper at your disposal you can hold up an entire army with your precision shooting. You're the one taking out key personnel and signalmen, and you're there to cause panic by taking out the guy sitting eating his food; that causes mayhem. A sniper can cause a hell of a lot of damage!

Exactly how personal is a sniper's kill?
You're looking through a high-powered scope that can magnify a target by up to 50 times. It's like looking at someone from across a table — but I'm sitting in a hide 600 metres away. I know the colour of their hair, their eyes and what they've been doing for the last few hours of their life. As a sniper we're there to gather as much information as possible before we get the call to pull the trigger.

Did you ever find yourself in any particularly sticky situations?
We were stationed in an outpost in Iraq. It was basically 10 minutes' walk from our main base at Basra Palace, but it would take us two-and-a-half hours to drive as the insurgents were smashing us from every angle. At night the gates of hell would open, and bullets rained down on us. I was sniping from a multi-storey building as they fired RPGs at our oil tankers just below. Luckily for us they failed to arm the grenades properly, so they didn't detonate.

As a sniper, how did you turn the tide of war?
Most probably on the day of my longest kill. I'd led my men into what turned out to be a killing zone. It was a complete stalemate! The Taliban had a scout marshalling their troops, who we could hear on the radio. They flooded the field we were crossing, leaving us stranded, so I managed to ward off the scout with nine missed shots. But then the nomads cleared off, leaving their tents and their fires. I thought I had been spotted and was expecting to be flanked, so I had to think quickly.

How did you pull off your longest kill?
Expecting an incoming attack any minute, my spotter and I frantically scanned the landscape, looking for hostiles. I came across two Taliban soldiers taking up position on a belt-fed machine gun. I knew my calculations from my last shots and proceeded to fire. My first shot missed so I readjusted my sights and fired again. This time it was a hit! I then fired on the second target, quickly bolted the gun and fired again. I had two bullets in the air about three seconds apart. The first missed, but the second hit. I had picked them off from about 2500 metres out.

And that made you a target for al-Qaeda...
My story was leaked to the press and the lads and me were interviewed after our medal parade. They took a particular interest in my world-record shots and as the story came out in the papers I was told to enjoy the limelight. Then the next day I received another call saying intelligence suggested there was a plot to kidnap and murder me because one of the Taliban I'd killed was a leader. I had to go into hiding for almost two years under police protection.

Does the threat of being tracked down still worry you?
Not as much now, but in the army we are always taught about the "what if" factor. The police are still aware of the situation and that helps make it more comfortable. But we still have to watch what we do. One minute you could be opening a door and the next minute you're gone.

Have you got any battle scars as a memento?
A few. I went into a firefight where my wagon was shot around 136 times. I was hit in the helmet and the round went right through the top and luckily missed my head. It left me knocked out for 20 seconds and when I came around I was hit through my body armour. That bullet exited out of my side. My driver at the time saved me, because I would have fallen out the door if he hadn't dragged me back in. I spent a day in a field ambulance as we were so far forward, suffering from concussion, whiplash and vomiting. I had to tell the doctor I was fine as I wanted to get back to the lads in the fight.

What was your worst experience?
I spent our time in Kosovo digging up mass graves. We were completely helpless. As we patrolled at the border near Pristina the Serbs were shooting at us all the time but we weren't allowed to shoot back. We got absolutely smashed in Kosovo.

ROSALIE ORR

Congrats on your ZOO debut. Are you excited to be in the mag?
Yeah, super excited. I worked really hard and got my body in good shape, so I'm really happy I can share it!
How in God's name do you get as fit as an Olympic athlete?
I usually train two hours a day, six days a week. I start with a personal trainer so I do one hour of weight and one hour of cardio. As long as I've got the weights in, that's the main thing. I always keep my body in this condition — unless I'm on holiday. I always give myself a break! I've just come back from Europe and I had three weeks off. It's painful getting back into it!
Would you ever do your training topless or in a G-string like you are in these photos?
I don't think they'd let me into the gym in that sort of stuff [laughs]. Maybe if I was doing a workout around the house!
The best part of your body is...
I would say probably my smile or my bum. I work so hard with all my squats so I've got it in the shape I like it in now. But I think a smile tells a lot about a person, and I like to take care of my smile.
What gets you the most compliments?
Probably my bum. Well, that's from the boys, anyway!
Do you get hit on at the gym?
Yeah, all the time! I get, "Are you a model?" or I get guys giving me their cards and just random guys trying to help me with the machines even when I'm not struggling. It's a bit of a meat market in there!
Ever picked up at the gym?
No, not yet [laughs]. I find if a guy is trying to pick you up at the gym he's probably doing it to most of the other girls there, as well.
For you to be attracted to a bloke, does he have to be super fit? Or is a little bit of a beer gut OK?
He doesn't have to be super fit. For me, if he can hold a good conversation and be charismatic, then that's what I'm looking for the most. Looks fade and at the end of the day you want to be with somebody who can mentally stimulate you.
What turns you on, looks-wise?
I definitely like them to be tall. They have to be taller than me in high heels. I like tall, dark and handsome — that's my ideal.

What turns you off? Body odour? Alcoholism? Doesn't like cricket? Spends more on hair care products than you do?

Probably body odour. Bad breath and a guy who doesn't look after himself is a big turn-off!

Do you have any secret talents aside from being ridiculously fit?

I've spent the last five years working in finance as a client relationship manager and one of my talents is maths and communicating with clients. But I just didn't have a passion for it so I resigned and completely changed my life! I decided to get into health and fitness, and I'm studying to be a personal trainer. I'm looking to set up an online clothing label with a girlfriend of mine and maybe opening a gym in the future!

Nice. Do you enjoy a drink?

I do. I think it's really important having a balance in your life!

What are you like after you've had a few beverages?

After a few drinks I'd say I'm pretty flirty. I'd say it takes me around four glasses of champagne to get tipsy — I'm a bit of a lightweight.

You mentioned you just got back from Europe. Did you get wild over there?

Yeah, I went to the Monaco Grand Prix so it was just pretty much three days of partying — it's such a big event! We had Eva Longoria on our boat, Pharrell was on the boat next to us and Naomi Campbell was a few boats up, so it was just full party mode!

Half your luck. You must be itching to get back over there...

I'm off to Europe again in two months and a friend of mine has some connections over there so I'm going to have a few meetings. I never book a return flight and I never plan anything, so I just get there and see where it takes me.

PLUS TS TO "MAD DOG UGALL

What the AFL will be like in 2040

Based on the way the game's going, here's what fans can expect in the nearish future...

SPORT AMMO: The VFL competition's name was changed to the AFL in 1990.

GETTING TO THE GROUND

There'll be no more crowded public transport in the years to come. No, when the next generation of stadiums are built, there won't even be public roads leading to them. Instead, private tollways will take you straight there for the low, low cost of just $95.60 per kilometre. Then you can park your electric car, provided the smart chip embedded in your wrist shows your bank balance is high enough to pay the low, low $23,500 fee.

WELCOME TO THE STADIUM OF THE FUTURE!

The Andrew Demetriou Memorial Stadium is a technological tour de force that makes older grounds look like sandpits. But it still has a lot in common with old-school arenas such as Etihad, like the fact that it was built using squillions of dollars of taxpayers' money and is covered in the logo of a foreign-owned company to raise even more dough. It's the home ground of the AFL's newest expansion team, the Rockhampton Internet Barons, and it rests on a man-made island that was formed by dumping garbage on the Great Barrier Reef. The ground comfortably accommodates 80,000 people whose annual income is above $10 million, and doesn't seat any bloody one who earns less than that.

A 24-CARAT AT-GAME CROWD EXPERIENCE

Rising ticket costs — we're talking $67,000 for a seat that's not under cover, and that's the pensioner concession price — have resulted in a slight change to the crowd demographic, but the powers that be are convinced it's for the better. No longer will families have to sit near someone who gets a bit "passionate" and "barracks" loudly. All seats now have in-built directional microphones that will direct security drones to anyone who swears or says the word "Ball!" above a certain volume. Offenders will be removed immediately. Fans who abide by the rules will enjoy their next-generation seats, which are internally heated and have call buttons so you can have food delivered to you. Each comes with a widescreen hologram that will bring the occupant the latest in advertising — and, if contractual obligations permit, one or two replays of the action on the field.

THE CORPORATE BOX REVOLUTION

Corporate boxes are an important revenue stream for clubs and the league, which is why in 2040 they occupy 80 per cent of the space at the ground. Decked out in the material of the corporate fans' choice — from Italian marble to snow leopard throw rugs — they're jam-packed with the latest luxury furnishings and entertainment systems. Each comes with a crew of highly trained service providers who'll cater to any request. The only way you can tell them apart from the penthouses of the rich and famous is the small window that looks onto the playing surface, which has been installed in case anyone gets nostalgic and actually wants to look at the game.

WORLD-BEATING FOOD AND BEVERAGES

The fan of tomorrow will experience a range of five-star dining options whether they want to or not. Alcohol was banned from all areas of football grounds in 2022 (except, of course, from the corporate boxes) but non-alcoholic, soy-based imitation beer is available to anyone who can prove they don't have a criminal record. All food is prepared by accredited chefs who have been trained in France, with a huge range of non-dairy vegetarian options to choose from. Federal legislation prevents the sale of pies, chips, hot dogs or other dangerous food. But fans with the correct security clearance and investment portfolio will be able to consume lab-grown "wagyu" beef in small amounts.

MAD DOG'S hits & memories

In The Man Plan, former NRL superstar Adam MacDougall shows blokes how to avoid becoming another health statistic

How'd do you decide to do The Man Plan?
When I retired from football a lot of my mates I played with were blowing up, particularly around the belly, and they used to ask me how I kept fit. I was mostly advising them on how to eat properly, in particular food they could eat on the run, so I designed a product called The Man Shake to help them lose the beer gut without losing the beer. It's spiralled from there.

Two out of three Aussie blokes are obese and many die of lifestyle diseases — is that also one of your inspirations?
One of my best mates died under the age of 40 from a heart attack and left three young girls behind. It broke my heart. Ironically, he'd been to the doctor and I asked him how he went and he said, "Yeah, I'm in great health, I'm just fat." Fat is pretty serious. There are some consequences to being

"THE NEWCASTLE KNIGHTS WERE A BUNCH OF NUTCASES IN THE 1990S"

fat. But that's like most Aussie blokes... she'll be right, mate. We don't sit around going, "Does my arse look big in this?" I say to blokes in the book, "Take some ownership of your health and your life".

How much did league training change during your career?

When I started, the trainer had a bigger gut than the blokes he was training. We'd rip into the chicken and a six-pack of beer. By the end of my career we'd come off and they'd weigh us and we couldn't drink beer, and we'd have ice baths and rehydrate ... the remarkable thing these days is how little pro athletes actually train. It's all based around what I talk about in the book — short-interval, high-intensity training. Guys are training their bodies the wrong way — they're going for long, slow runs and things, but you don't burn calories when you come away from that. If you do it the right way you can burn calories for another 24, 48, 72 hours after you finish.

What are your stand-out memories of playing Origin?

There's nowhere to hide in the Origin arena. In club games there are obviously guys who aren't the best at what they do and there are plenty of people you can target, but at Origin level you've got make sure your team has no chinks in its armour. I'm pretty proud of having won a Man of the Match and played in a 3-0 series win for NSW.

Who was your funniest team-mate?

Akuila Uate, particularly when he first came from Fiji. His diet was Burger Rings and Red Bull. I remember team meetings and hearing this crunching sound and there'd be Akuila with a pack of Burger Rings hidden under his training shirt while sipping on his Red Bull. Then he'd have a 12-piece feed after training ... The guy I enjoyed playing against the most was Wendell... to be on the end of one of his sledges was priceless. He's got his biggest headline in 10 years by breaking poor old Ben Ross's arm. He's a social media phenomenon again.

What did you think when Matty Johns once revealed — bullshit or not — that you were talking to your thighs in the dressing room before a match?

I look back at that Knights side in the '90s period and they really were a bunch of nutcases. The asylum was being run by the patients. Loose humans but good characters who liked to make up stories, and a lot of them were about me, which I really enjoyed. People would meet me and they'd be surprised I could speak — they thought I was some loose unit kept in a special room.

Two premierships with the Knights in 1997 and 2001 — was one more memorable?

Oh yeah, 1997, far and away. We all remember our first kiss. Newcastle had come off the back of the BHP closure. The steelworks were the backbone of the community and the town was quite depressed. They pinned their hopes and joys on the football side. The way we won that game at the end, you couldn't have written it any better. After that a police escort through the city and a tickertape parade, on stage with the Screaming Jets, our own private concert with Silverchair... it was a great week. I don't think I paid for a cab ride or a feed or a beer in Newcastle for five years after that.

GAMES

NEW CONSOLES!

Both Microsoft and Sony have added some pizazz to their existing consoles, giving us more bang for our buck. The new Xbox One now comes with a terabyte of storage, which makes sense when every game update feels larger than your monthly broadband quota. Meanwhile, there's a pimped-up PlayStation 4 heading our way, bundled with the release of Metal Gear Solid V: The Phantom Pain. It has pretty colours 'n' stuff.

UNCHARTED TRILOGY COMING TO PS4

The original Indiana Jones-like adventures of Nathan Drake are coming to PS4. Sure, this tomb raider ain't as pretty to look at, but he's the kind of champion we all think we are after a few schooners. His adventures are getting remastered in one PS4 bundle, giving anyone who foolishly missed out a second chance to play.

SHOOTER

DIRTY BOMB

7/10

THE GIST: In this team-based, first-person shooter, it's 2020 and London is lawless and abandoned. You're a merc, going gun-to-gun against other soldiers of fortune on the hunt for cash and glory. It's fast-paced gunplay with traps and unique classes.
ZOO SAYS: This wild 'n' zany shooter is maniacal shooting, dying and re-spawning on repeat. We love the animated look, quirky characters and run-and-gun simplicity, but it's just your standard beer brand on tap.

CRIME DRAMA

A MOST VIOLENT YEAR

[MA15+]

8/10

THE GIST: Abel Morales (Oscar Isaac) is an honest, hardworking owner of a heating oil company. His integrity is tested when his drivers start getting hijacked and he requires finance for a potentially game-changing deal.
ZOO SAYS: Another smart, thrilling and masterful movie from J.C. Chandor (Margin Call, All Is Lost).

BLU-RAY

SCI-FI

JUPITER ASCENDING

[M]

4/10

THE GIST: This ridiculous "space opera" from the creators of The Matrix is about aliens harvesting humans so they can live forever. Channing Tatum is a stupid-looking wolf-human and Mila Kunis is the heir to Earth.
ZOO SAYS: It looks sick and is super-creative, but is too weird and laughably bad in parts.

CRIME DRAMA

RAY DONOVAN: SEASON 2

[MA15+]

8/10

THE GIST: Former Boston thug Ray Donovan (no relation to Casey) is now a "fixer" in LA, making big bucks getting celebs out of sticky situations. This season he has to deal with a corrupt FBI chief, nosy reporter and family dramas.
ZOO SAYS: Ray (Liev Schreiber) is a a bad-arse character whose broken life is a guilty pleasure to watch.

FILM

TED 2
[CTC]

8/10

THE GIST: Foul-mouthed stoner bear Ted (Seth MacFarlane) marries Tami-Lynn (Jessica Barth) and asks his best mate John (Mark Wahlberg) to be the sperm donor for their baby after a failed attempt to steal Tom Brady's jizz. But Ted must prove he's human to get custody.
ZOO SAYS: Though it's sadly missing Mila Kunis, this follow-up to the awesome original is no disappointment. The banter between bros John and Ted is consistently funny.

SPY-FI

THE MAN FROM U.N.C.L.E.
[CTC]

7/10

THE GIST: Guy Ritchie (Snatch, Sherlock Holmes) gives the popular '60s TV spy series of the same name a modern update as a CIA agent (Henry Cavill, Man of Steel) reluctantly teams up with a KGB agent (Armie Hammer, The Lone Ranger) at the height of the Cold War to stop a mysterious foe.
ZOO SAYS: The combination of Ritchie's visual flare, well-staged action, strong leads and support from Hugh Grant and Ex Machina hottie Alicia Vikander works a treat.

TROPIC THUNDER
ONE, FRIDAY JUNE 26, 9PM

Cancel all your plans this Friday night, 'cos one of the best comedies in the last decade is showing on free to air. Directed by Ben Stiller and starring Robert Downey Jr as a blackfaced Aussie, Jack Black as a farty, coke-addicted comedian, Tom Cruise as a fat, bald psycho and Stiller going "full retard" as Simple Jack, this piss-take of Hollywood is a classic.

MUSIC

FREEDOM

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Almost 20 years since they broke up off the back of the classic The Shape of Punk to Come, the legendary Swedes are back with 10 unexpected new tracks. More polished and less unpredictable than their off-kilter jazz/electro/political-punk 1998 magnum opus, Elektra, Dawkins Christ and Thought is Blood are still up there with their best, and Françafrique is a cool curveball. ZOO SAYS: The first five tracks justify the band's return, but the back half of the album loses steam.

SOUL

LEON BRIDGES
COMING HOME

6/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Twenty-five-year-old Fort Worth, Texas, newcomer Leon Bridges' 1960s-inspired look and sound is that retro, we wouldn't be surprised if we found a DeLorean parked in his garage. ZOO SAYS: Record labels fell over themselves to sign him up, and we can see why — he's got a very smooth and marketable look. However, his simple take on the classics lacks originality and the "baby, baby" lyrics wear thinner than the amount of hair left on Jason Statham's head.

METAL

LINDEMANN
SKILLS IN PILLS

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: This twisted collab between Rammstein singer Till Lindemann and Swedish metal legend Peter Tägtgren is like an even more fked-up version of Rammstein. ZOO SAYS: The lyrics are in English and all about shagging fat chicks, loving lady boys and copping golden showers. You'll laugh, cringe and bang your head all at once.

PUNK

BIOMASS

7/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Hailing from Collingwood, this trio sound as filthy as the streets from whence they came. To the uninitiated, their dirty, dirgy punk may come across as the sort of din a drunk hobo might make as he's tripping over your trash cans at 4am, but there's actually some smart lyrics and melodies hidden among the grubby basslines, fuzzy riffs and shouty vocals. ZOO SAYS: The excellently named Batpiss's music is perfect for boozin', biffin' and scaring the elderly.

METAL

HIGH ON FIRE
LUMINIFEROUS

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: This Californian trio are the modern Motörhead — you always know what you're gonna get and they're consistently killer. Their fifth effort is another slab of tight sludge/thrash metal powered by newly sober Matt Pike's throaty bellow and righteous riffs. ZOO SAYS: Thunderous tracks like The Black Pot slay, but it's the moody The Cave that rules hardest.

7 THINGS TO SAY DOWN THE PUB ABOUT...

CHARLIE CHARLIE

A viral video craze about summoning demons with balancing pencils is sweeping the interwebz

1 The "Juego de la Lapicera" is an old Spanish game: balance a pencil on another, placed on a piece of paper split into quarters: two say yes, two say no. After asking a question, the pencil spins to an answer

2 The game went viral after a video from a Dominican Republic school was posted online in April, with a twist: the question asked is, "Charlie, Charlie, are you there?"

3 The deputy head of the school said, "Three children were absent from class because their parents believed they were possessed by the Devil." In Colombia, four school students were taken to the emergency room with hysteria after playing the #CharlieCharlieChallenge

4 On May 23, 2015, the hashtag was tweeted close to 1m times

5 Hundreds of videos have been posted online of shrieking teen girls from around the world taking the challenge and seeing the pencil move. "They are opening the door to the Devil," says a Dominican priest

6 Science blogs suggest there is no demon called Charlie and that gravity and breezes move the pencil. What about the greater mystery — since when have Gen Y kids heard of pencils?

7 In an Aussie YouTube version, the quarters have Vegemite, honey, peanut butter and a bottle of Coopers. A finger gently pushes the pencil so it points at the beer
